Business, Government, and Society (59 students, 6.21/7.00)	Summer 2023
Business, Government, and Society (51 students, 6.50/7.00)	Summer 2022
Business, Government, and Society (48 students, 6.46/7.00)	Summer 2021

► Objective: This course examines how non-market factors—such as policymakers, regulators, and social activists—shape firms’ strategic decisions. It explores how business can navigate political, economic, social and technological pressures in a global economy. Through case studies and discussions, students will learn to evaluate non-market strategies, weigh risks and rewards, and recommend informed decisions that align with long-term business strategies and societal expectations. The course emphasizes the role of government policies, globalization, and stakeholder interactions in shaping modern business landscapes.

► Keywords: PEST framework, market power and antitrust, globalization & trade, property rights, growth, sustainability, externalities, NGOs as social regulators, asymmetric information, two-sided market
